Commies Turn Allied Flank And Center In New Assaults

(By The Associated Press)
Tokyo, Nov. 25—United Nations forces rammed ahead toward the Red Manchurian border in the northwest offensive today, but their extreme right flank was shoved back by counterattacking Reds.

Gains on the winding 80-mile front ranged up to six miles, with Chongju falling to the Americans on the left flank of the concerted drive. But on the extreme east flank, strong Communist forces plunged six miles into South Korean positions.

A U. S. First Corps spokesman described the Red attack as the first major reversal of the two-day offensive which General MacArthur hopes will end the war by Christmas.

Chinese Dig In

The Reds penetrated the South Korean Eighth Division to a point near Yongun, 22 air miles east of Tokchon, on the far right flank of the northwest front. The spokesman said the Reds presumably were Chinese.

It appeared that the Reds were trying to turn the flank of the offensive, but it remained to be seen in what strength. Prisoners captured Friday said a full Chinese division was dug in about 10 miles north of Yongun.

The scrap on the right flank of the northwest front contrasted with the absence of opposition on the extreme left flank. There the highway hub of Chongju fell to a tank-led task force of the U. S. 24th Division without a fight.

Chongju is 51 road miles south of the Yalu river border city of Sinuiju, main gateway for Chinese Communists entering the war. Patrols of the 24th struck north two miles outside Chongju toward Kuang.

In that sector there was no resistance.

Minor Setback

Earlier Saturday, the offensive was dealt another, but minor, setback in the center of the line. In the Taechon area, 22 miles northeast of Chongju and on the 24th's right flank, the South Korean First Division was pushed back one mile and a half.

There the Reds pierced the line only temporarily. They struck in the predawn darkness, but were hurled back in the daylight hours.

All along the line, B-29 Superfortresses and fighters supported the U.N. drive.

Winter Strikes Nation With Cold Fury Early This Morning

(By The Associated Press)
Winter struck a large part of the country with cold fury early this morning, setting bitter records.

Winds of hurricane force blasted metropolitan New York, sweeping sea water at least one mile inland at one spot. Chilling temperatures seeped into southern states.

Winds up to 76 miles an hour of hurricane force, were reported in New York. The howling wind tumbled houses and knocked over trees as it whipped inland from the sea. Ten persons were rescued from seaside homes. Others in the Staten Island area were ordered to evacuate their homes.

At Cleveland, one of the worst blizzards of November record almost halted street transportation. Traffic was whittled down to a few public vehicles and there was little likelihood that these would continue in operation if the storm continued.

WILL SHOW NEW FILM AT THANK SERVICE SUNDAY

The annual Thank Offering service, sponsored by the three missionary societies, will be held in the chapel of St. James Lutheran church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

Featured at this service will be the showing of the new sound film, "Kezli of Zoror." The film story is factually true, the incidents presented being typical of the life in the interior of Liberia, Africa. Kezli, a boy of eight years, is seriously ill and is brought to the Christian mission station for medical attention. Following his recovery, after a major operation with poor facilities, he comes to the day school at Zoror to learn to read and write. Later he goes to the Muhlenberg school and while there decides to enter the Christian ministry.

Four Choirs Sunday

Participating in the service on Sunday evening will be Mrs. C. C. Culp, Mrs. A. A. Maust, Miss Sara Mehring, Mrs. Luther McDonnell and Dr. Ralph E. Gresh. The senior choir will offer the anthem, "Now Thank We All Our God" by Carl F. Mueller.

At the 10:30 service on Sunday morning Dr. Gresh will speak on the theme, "Our Partnership with God." Special music will be provided by the men's chorus and four choirs. The men's chorus will sing, "Prayer of Thanksgiving," a Netherlands folk tune. The four choirs will offer as their number the anthem, "Thou Crownest the Year" by Fred C. Mower.

GRAVE CAVES IN; POSTPONE RITES

Heavy rains Friday evening caused a grave cave-in at St. Joseph's Catholic cemetery, Bonneauville, and forced a postponement of the funeral and burial services of Mrs. George Smith, 49-year-old mother of 10 children who died suddenly Thursday morning. Services were scheduled for 9 o'clock this morning but have been postponed until 9 o'clock Monday morning at St. Joseph's Catholic church, Bonneauville.

Prayers will be said tonight and Sunday evening at 8 o'clock at the Kernan funeral home, McSherrystown.

In addition to those announced Friday the following also survive the deceased: Two brothers, Roselle Topper, New Oxford R. 2, and Paul Topper, McSherrystown and seven grandchildren.

HEAVY DAMAGE BY STORM IN LITTLESTOWN

Considerable damage was done by the wind and rain storm in the Littlestown area.

All of the large plate glass windows of the Walter D. Shoemaker garage, north of Littlestown along the Gettysburg road, were blown out.

Part of the tar paper roof of the Windsor Shoe company, Littlestown, was blown off and considerable damage done by the pouring rain. No estimate on the amount of damage was available at press time.

A large chicken house 40 feet in length was blown over and completely demolished on the property of Herbert Zepp, tenanted by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hoke, along the Littlestown-Hanover road.

Half of the roof of the house of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brookhouse, corner of Walnut and Lumber streets, Littlestown, was torn off and considerable damage done by rain.

The flag pole at Littlestown high school was bent in half.

Lost Pocketbook Is Returned To Owner

A Waverly, N. Y., man's wallet containing $55 and a number of cards which he left in a tourist cabin near here on November 21, will be returned to him through the efforts of the state police. R. H. Elston reported to Tonawanda, Pa., police the loss of the wallet. He said he had left it under a mattress at Wishard's cabins on the Harrisburg road. The latter turned it over to state police.

RAIN WASHES OUT BUSINESS AT MART TODAY

The Farmers market, like numerous other places in the county, was virtually flooded out this morning. There was more water than there were customers. The araway in front of the market house entrance ran like a creek in floodtime with water, and water poured into the market building under the doors. More rain leaked through the roof, and rain water ran several inches deep down the main aisle.

Business was practically at a standstill, less than a dozen customers braving the weather. There were a number of farmers on hand with the usual Saturday morning produce, at prices which were unchanged from last week.

Ample Pork Supply

There was a good supply of pork, with loins selling at $1 a pound; backbone, 50 cents a pound; ribs, 50 cents a pound; neck roast, 55 cents a pound; shoulder roast, 65 cents a pound; ham roast, 75 cents a pound; sausage, 60 cents a pound; scrapple, 25 cents a pound; pudding, 50 cents a pound; fresh side meat, 55 cents a pound; lard, 22 cents a pound; and liver, 50 cents a pound.

Eggs were still mostly 67 cents a dozen for large whites and browns and mediums 50 and 52 cents a dozen. Chickens were 55 and 60 cents a pound. Endive was ten cents a stalk and turnips ten and 15 cents a box. Potatoes brought $1.75 a bushel.

Cup cheese was 15 cents; cottage cheese, 20 cents a pint; whipping cream, 35 cents a pint; pies, 40 and 50 cents each; cookies, 25 cents a dozen; bread, 20 cents a loaf; rolls, 20 cents a dozen; cakes, $1.

Weather May Delay Turning On Of Christmas Lights Tonight

Whether the Christmas lights will be turned on at 7:30 o'clock tonight as planned by the Exchange club, which has charge of the decorating and lighting project this year, was dependent upon the weatherman.

Herbert Oyler, chairman of the club's committee in charge of the lights, said it was possible that the remaining work of connecting the strings of colored lights might be completed this afternoon unless weather prevented.

If it is impossible to have the lights ready this evening, the opening of the illumination will be postponed until Monday night, Oyler said.

The committee is going ahead with its plans to have the lights turned on tonight, he declared, unless weather prevents. Plans call for Glenn Guise, president of the Ex-

A. L. WOLFORD IS CONVICTED IN 15 MINUTES

Albert L. Wolford, former Gettysburg borough policeman, was convicted of violating the Pennsylvania Bulk Sales act by a jury shortly after 11 o'clock this morning. The jurors deliberated 15 minutes.

Arguments by District Attorney Daniel E. Teeter and Wolford's counsel, Sidney Friedman, and the charge by Judge W. C. Sheely, completed the case this morning.

Most of Friday afternoon's session of court was devoted to direct and cross examination of Wolford's story that his business was "badly hit" by the closing of the Lincoln highway for the construction of the new section between here and Chambersburg.

Wolford said that sales of gasoline dropped from 18,000 gallons per month to 5,000 gallons. He added that he continued to go "deeper and deeper into debt" and finally his creditors planned to foreclose.

Says He Advised Miller

Regret Center Plot Action

Gettysburg, Pa.
Nov. 19, 1950

To The Town Council:

We, the members of the Study Club of Gettysburg would regret to see the center plot removed from Lincoln Square.

It is our opinion that this plot adds to the charm of Gettysburg and that it could be made even more attractive.

If the center plot is considered a traffic hazard it could perhaps be alleviated by placing traffic lights on the four corners. In any event we believe this should be tried before the plot is removed.

If the lights with the plot remaining do not correct the situation there would be no additional expense since the lights would have to be installed if the center plot were removed.

Severe Damage Over Widespread Local Area Is Caused By Strong Winds And Heavy Rains; Worst Snowstorm In History Sweeping State

27 Inches Of Snow Blankets Washington, Pa.; Other Towns Mauled

A furious storm raged across Pennsylvania today, burying Pittsburgh and the western end of the state in the greatest continuous snowfall on record there. In east and central Pennsylvania pouring rain and winds raging upwards of 60 miles an hour caused heavy damage.

Washington, Pa., had 27 inches of snow. Butler had 19 inches and Meadville 23 inches.

The Steel City was smothered under 16 inches of snow that fell overnight. And the Weather bureau said another 10 to 15 inches more was on the way before the storm has a chance to blow itself out.

Vehicles Are Abandoned

Essential services in the great city slowed to a trickle. State and city highways department crews fought a losing battle in their efforts to push open a lane for autos on main highways. Side streets and roads were blocked entirely, with many cars abandoned by their drivers adding more problems to the tie-up. Trolleys and buses stalled in their tracks.

Preliminary reports from the storm area listed seven deaths, five of them men who collapsed and died of heart attacks while struggling to clear away snowdrifts.

65-Mile Winds

In the eastern third of the state howling winds and pouring rain carried into the day the storm that wrought widespread damage throughout the night. Some communities reported wind gusts reached 65 miles per hour.

Houses were unroofed in many places, fires broke out, and more often than not were extinguished by the downpour before firemen arrived.

Big plate glass windows of business firms shattered and broke in a dozen cities.

Rural Roads Blocked

Many rural roads were blocked by storm-felled trees and utility poles. Near Tamaqua, 35-year-old William Kunkel, driving home from work, was severely injured beneath a falling tree that wrecked his auto.

Electric power failures ranging from a minute or two to several hours affected almost every city in the area.

At 9 a.m. it still was so dark in Philadelphia that many cars were operating with their headlights on. The snow was confined to the western areas of the state, but there the storm struck in full fury.

Many towns in western Pennsylvania apparently will be snowed in completely.

AUXILIARY TO MEET

The regular monthly meeting of the hospital auxiliary will be held Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the board room at the Warner hospital. Plans will be discussed for the benefit party.

L. E. Oyler Home Unroofed By High Winds This Morning; Damage Is Heavy

Hardest hit locally by Friday night's rain and wind storm was the home of Postmaster and Mrs. Lawrence E. Oyler, 334 Baltimore street.

There the wind found a loose section of the tin roofing on the front of the building and raked it, and the rest of the front roof, up to the peak of the roof.

From about 12:15 o'clock this morning until about 9 o'clock the rain poured in through the opening, rushing down steps and drenching every room in the three-story house.

Ceilings Crumble

Mrs. Oyler said that some ceilings had already begun to crumble and she believes that all will fall eventually. The house was repaired a few weeks ago.

Working by the light of a coal oil lamp, Mr. and Mrs. Oyler at first attempted to catch the flow of water through the open roof with tubs and buckets, but the tubs, soon overflowed and the rain poured in through the house. The fire company was called, but a canvas large enough to cover the opening could not be immediately located. Late this morning workmen were attempting to place a canvas over the opening.

Roof Touches Power Line

Between Arendtsville and Biglerville the storm "rolled up" a tin roof on a barn at the farm of Emory Raffensperger. The roof touched a main power line through the area and showers of sparks descended. Biglerville and Arendtsville firemen were called about 6:30 o'clock as a precautionary measure. The firemen placed a ladder under the wire, holding it up and away from the roof.

A barn roof on the property of Charles C. Mackley, near Two Taverns, was blown off by the high winds.

At Littlestown the flag pole at the high school playground was bent almost double.

Large numbers of television aerials throughout the area were twisted into almost pretzel shapes by the wind, while others were unharmed.

On Lincoln Square at the First National bank building, the wind tore a street sign from a "white way" standard, while Christmas decorations remained on the standard. Gettysburg's Christmas tree in the Lincoln Square plot stood up against the buffeting winds and suffered no damage.

Limbs of trees fell in all sections of the county. One huge tree on the property of Mrs. Beatrice Sponseller, South Stratton street, lost a limb as large as a full sized tree, but the limb fell away from the house.

College Choir To Give Xmas Concert Dec. 10

The Gettysburg college choir of 52 voices, under the direction of Parker B. Wagnild, head of the music department at the college, will give its 16th annual Christmas concert in the Eddie Plank memorial gymnasium Sunday evening, December 10, at 8:30 o'clock.

The newly organized women's chorus of 40 voices under the direction of Miss Ruth Luebbe, preceptor at Hanson hall, will sing three numbers.

The Christmas tableau, which has been a feature of previous concerts, will again be arranged by the Student Christian association, and Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of the college, will bring the Christmas message.

Bigler Firemen Get Two Morning Calls

The Biglerville fire company was called out twice this morning within a period of a little over an hour.

At 6:15 o'clock the company responded to a call to the Emory Raffensperger farm, Biglerville R. D., where wires rubbing against the tin roof resulted in creating sparks.

A ladder was placed against the wires to keep them from the roof until properly repaired by power linemen.

At 7:15 the company was called to extinguish a chimney fire at a property near Biglerville.

PLEADED TO SORORITY

Miss Jacquelin A. Long, 420 Carlisle street, has been pledged by Alpha Phi sorority at Bucknell University, Lewisburg. She is a graduate of Gettysburg high school.

Electric Service Cut Off for More Than 4 Hours This Morning

With power lines knocked out by what Metropolitan Edison Company crews said was the "worst storm in years," Gettysburg and this section of the county, including the Littlestown area, was without current for four and a half hours this morning.

When high winds leveled the 66,000 volt transmission lines between York and Hanover, all electrical service to this area was cut off about 4:15 o'clock.

Until those high tension lines were restored at 8:45 a.m., Hanover and Gettysburg and their surrounding areas were without electrical service.

Lines, Poles Down

Richard E. Dreas, local manager for the utility company, said it was the heaviest storm damage since he was stationed here three years ago.

Trees and branches blown across power lines caused most of the damage, he said, although some power line poles also went down. Near Bonneauville, a chicken house was reported blown through power lines.

"I never say anything like this even in our worst summer electrical storms," Dreas said. He added that utility crewmen who have worked here for years said this storm was the "worst ever."

Asked about local line damage, Dreas said: "We have a bushel and a peck of that and it will take all of today to restore the local lines that have been knocked out. More calls are coming in all the time about service lines that are out. We're keeping after the work with all the men we have available and we'll keep going until all lines are restored."

Winds Cause Damage

Most of the damage to electric lines was caused by the very high winds that were estimated to have reached 50 or 60 miles an hour. The wind-driven torrents of rain that totaled more than 1.25 inches by 8:30 a.m. added to the trouble.

The Adams Rural Electric co-operative substations at Gettysburg, Hanover and Red Lion were without current while the Metropolitan Edison power lines were out. REA work crews were busy restoring local damage today.

Heldt Home Is Unroofed

About 3:30 o'clock this morning the high winds ripped the roof off the home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Heldt, 305 North Stratton street, and laid the home open to torrents of rain that ruined most of the interior of the home and many of its furnishings.

Dr. Heldt and members of his family attempted to check the flow of rain through the home with the use of washtubs and buckets but the downpour sent streams of water down the stairways to the first floor while more rain seeped through ceilings and floors.

Workmen were called early this morning to cover the exposed section of the attic against the weather.

Dr. Heldt could not estimate the damage immediately.

Storm Briefs

At the Warner hospital, the emergency lighting system took care of illumination in the operating and delivery rooms and hospital corridors but patients' rooms had no light and the dumb waiters and elevators did not operate. Breakfast trays had to be carried from the kitchens to the patients. Gas stoves in the kitchen made it possible to prepare the morning meal.

Kerosene lamps were pressed into service at the county home this morning when the electric power failed. Candles were used in the kitchen at the county jail while the morning meal was prepared on (Continued on Page 2)

A Waverly, N. Y., man's wallet containing $55 and a number of cards which he left in a tourist cabin near here on November 21, will be returned to him through the efforts of the state police. R. H. Elston reported to Tonawanda, Pa., police the loss of the wallet. He said he had left it under a mattress at Wishard's cabins on the Harrisburg road. The latter turned it over to state police.

RAIN WASHES OUT BUSINESS AT MART TODAY

The Farmers market, like numerous other places in the county, was virtually flooded out this morning. There was more water than there were customers. The araway in front of the market house entrance ran like a creek in floodtime with water, and water poured into the market building under the doors. More rain leaked through the roof, and rain water ran several inches deep down the main aisle.

Business was practically at a standstill, less than a dozen customers braving the weather. There were a number of farmers on hand with the usual Saturday morning produce, at prices which were unchanged from last week.

Ample Pork Supply

There was a good supply of pork, with loins selling at $1 a pound; backbone, 50 cents a pound; ribs, 50 cents a pound; neck roast, 55 cents a pound; shoulder roast, 65 cents a pound; ham roast, 75 cents a pound; sausage, 60 cents a pound; scrapple, 25 cents a pound; pudding, 50 cents a pound; fresh side meat, 55 cents a pound; lard, 22 cents a pound, and liver, 50 cents a pound.

Eggs were still mostly 67 cents a dozen for large whites and browns and mediums 50 and 52 cents a dozen. Chickens were 55 and 60 cents a pound. Endive was ten cents a stalk and turnips ten and 15 cents a box. Potatoes brought $1.75 a bushel.

Cup cheese was 15 cents; cottage cheese, 20 cents a pint; whipping cream, 35 cents a pint; pies, 40 and 50 cents each; cookies, 25 cents a dozen; bread, 20 cents a loaf; rolls, 20 cents a dozen; cakes, $1.

Whisler, all of Hanover. The fines were paid to Justice of the Peace Chester Chronister, York Springs R. 2.

Joseph Godfrey, Felton R. 1, Pa., was fined $10 and costs by Justice of the Peace John Hinkle, York Springs R. D. on a charge of failing to give a proper signal.

Special Service Is Held On Thursday

A Thanksgiving Day service, was held by the Christian Science society of Gettysburg in the Kadel building on Baltimore street on Thanksgiving Day evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The Thanksgiving Day proclamation by the President Harry S. Truman was read.

The subject of the lesson-sermon was "Thanksgiving," and the golden text: "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men! And let them sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiving and declare his works with rejoicing." (Psalms 107: 21, 22.)

Expressions of gratitude for healing and benefits received during the past year was given by Christian Scientists in the congregation.

Weather May Delay Turning On Of Christmas Lights Tonight

Whether the Christmas lights will be turned on at 7:30 o'clock tonight as planned by the Exchange club, which has charge of the decorating and lighting project this year, was dependent upon the weatherman.

Herbert Oyler, chairman of the club's committee in charge of the lights, said it was possible that the remaining work of connecting the strings of colored lights might be completed this afternoon unless weather prevented.

If it is impossible to have the lights ready this evening, the opening of the illumination will be postponed until Monday night, Oyler said.

The committee is going ahead with its plans to have the lights turned on tonight, he declared, unless weather prevents. Plans call for Glenn Guise, president of the Exchange club, to throw the switch.

A Gettysburg fire truck is scheduled to bring Santa Claus to town tonight. After a ride around the principal streets, Santa, weather permitting, will "park" in Lincoln Square, in front of the Hotel Gettysburg.

The Chamber of Commerce has arranged this feature and provided the candy which Santa will present to the children.

Radio station WGET will broadcast Santa's arrival from the balcony of the hotel, and will interview a number of the children.

Store windows entered in The Gettysburg Times display contest will be judged at 7 o'clock tonight as originally planned unless "very" inclement weather prevents. Merchants are asked to leave their window lights on until at least 10 p.m.

Air Force May 5, 1948, he received training at Lackland Air Base, San Antonio, Texas, at the Military police school at Camp Gordon, Ga., and served at the New Castle Air Base, Wilmington, Del., before going overseas. His address is Cpl. Frank H. Fissel, Jr., AF 23997504, 4th Air Police Sqdn., APO 970, care of postmaster, San Francisco, Calif.

A. L. WOLFORD IS CONVICTED IN 15 MINUTES

Albert L. Wolford, former Gettysburg borough policeman, was convicted of violating the Pennsylvania Bulk Sales act by a jury shortly after 11 o'clock this morning. The jurors deliberated 15 minutes.

Arguments by District Attorney Daniel E. Teeter and Wolford's counsel, Sidney Friedman, and the charge by Judge W. C. Sheely, completed the case this morning.

Most of Friday afternoon's session of court was devoted to direct and cross examination of Wolford's story that his business was "badly hit" by the closing of the Lincoln highway for the construction of the new section between here and Chambersburg.

Wolford said that sales of gasoline dropped from 18,000 gallons per month to 5,000 gallons. He added that he continued to go "deeper and deeper into debt" and finally his creditors planned to foreclose.

Says He Advised Miller

Regret Center Plot Action

Gettysburg, Pa.
Nov. 19, 1950

To The Town Council:

We, the members of the Study Club of Gettysburg would regret to see the center plot removed from Lincoln Square.

It is our opinion that this plot adds to the charm of Gettysburg and that it could be made even more attractive.

If the center plot is considered a traffic hazard it could perhaps be alleviated by placing traffic lights on the four corners. In any event we believe this should be tried before the plot is removed.

If the lights with the plot remaining do not correct the situation there would be no additional expense since the lights would have to be installed if the center plot were removed.

Severe Damage Over Widespread Local Area Is Caused By Strong Winds And Heavy Rains; Worst Snowstorm In History Sweeping State

27 Inches Of Snow Blankets Washington, Pa.; Other Towns Mauled

A furious storm raged across Pennsylvania today, burying Pittsburgh and the western end of the state in the greatest continuous snowfall on record there. In east and central Pennsylvania pouring rain and winds raging upwards of 60 miles an hour caused heavy damage.

Washington, Pa., had 27 inches of snow. Butler had 19 inches and Meadville 23 inches.

The Steel City was smothered under 16 inches of snow that fell overnight. And the Weather bureau said another 10 to 15 inches more was on the way before the storm has a chance to blow itself out.

Vehicles Are Abandoned

Essential services in the great city slowed to a trickle. State and city highways department crews fought a losing battle in their efforts to push open a lane for autos on main highways. Side streets and roads were blocked entirely, with many cars abandoned by their drivers adding more problems to the tie-up. Trolleys and buses stalled in their tracks.

Preliminary reports from this storm area listed seven deaths, five of them men who collapsed and died of heart attacks while struggling to clear away snowdrifts.

65-Mile Winds

In the eastern third of the state howling winds and pouring rain carried into the day the storm that wrought widespread damage throughout the night. Some communities reported wind gusts reached 65 miles per hour.

Houses were unroofed in many places, fires broke out, and more often than not were extinguished by the downpour before firemen arrived.

Big plate glass windows of business firms shattered and broke in a dozen cities.

Many rural roads were blocked by storm-felled trees and utility poles. Near Tanamqua, 35-year-old William Kunkel, driving home from work, was severely injured beneath a falling tree that wrecked his auto.

Electric power failures ranging from a minute or two to several hours affected almost every city in the area.

At 9 a.m., it still was so dark in Philadelphia that many cars were operating with their headlights on.

The snow was confined to the western areas of the state, but there the storm struck in full fury.

Many towns in western Pennsylvania apparently will be snowed in completely.

The regular monthly meeting of the hospital auxiliary will be held Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the board room at the Warner hospital. Plans will be discussed for the benefit party.

L. E. Oyler Home Unroofed By High Winds This Morning; Damage Is Heavy

Hardest hit locally by Friday night's rain and wind storm was the home of Postmaster and Mrs. Lawrence E. Oyler, 334 Baltimore street.

There the wind found a loose section of the tin roofing on the front of the building and rolled it, and the rest of the front roof, up to the peak of the roof.

From about 12:15 o'clock this morning until about 9 o'clock the rain poured in through the opening, rushing down steps and drenching every room in the three-story house.

Ceilings Crumble

Mrs. Oyler said that some ceilings had already begun to crumble and she believes that all will fall eventually. The house was repapered a few weeks ago.

Working by the light of a coal oil lamp, Mr. and Mrs. Oyler at first attempted to catch the flow of water through the open roof with tubs and buckets, but the tubs soon overflowed and the rain poured in through the house. The fire company was called, but a canvas large enough to cover the opening could not be immediately located. Late this morning workmen were attempting to place a canvas over the opening.

Roof Touches Power Line

Between Arendtsville and Biglerville the storm "rolled up" a tin roof on a barn at the farm of Emory Raffensperger. The roof touched a main power line through the area and showers of sparks descended.

Biglerville and Arendtsville firemen were called about 6:30 o'clock as a precautionary measure. The firemen placed a ladder under the wire, holding it up and away from the roof.

A barn roof on the property of Charles C. Mackley, near Two Taverns, was blown off by the high winds.

At Littlestown the flag pole at the high school playground was bent almost double.

Large numbers of television aerials throughout the area were twisted into almost pretzel shapes by the wind, while others were unharmed.

On Lincoln Square at the First National bank building, the wind tore a street sign from a "white way" standard, while Christmas decorations remained on the standard. Gettysburg's Christmas tree in the Lincoln Square plot stood up against the buffeting winds and suffered no damage.

Limbs of trees fell in all sections of the county. One huge tree on the property of Mrs. Beatrice Sponseller, South Stratton street, lost a limb as large as a full sized tree, but the limb fell away from the house.

College Choir To Give Xmas Concert Dec. 10

The Gettysburg college choir of 52 voices, under the direction of Parker B. Wagnild, head of the music department at the college, will give its 16th annual Christmas concert in the Eddie Plank memorial gymnasium Sunday evening, December 10, at 8:30 o'clock.

The newly organized women's chorus of 40 voices under the direction of Miss Ruth Luebke, preceptress at Hanson hall, will sing three numbers.

The Christmas tableau, which has been a feature of previous concerts, will again be arranged by the Student Christian association, and Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of the college, will bring the Christmas message.

Bigler Firemen Get Two Morning Calls

The Biglerville fire company was called out twice this morning within a period of a little over an hour.

At 6:15 o'clock the company responded to a call to the Emory Raffensperger farm, Biglerville R. D., where wires rubbing against the tin roof resulted in creating sparks.

A ladder was placed against the wires to keep them from the roof until properly repaired by power linemen.

At 7:15 the company was called to extinguish a chimney fire at a property near Biglerville.

PLEGDED TO SOLIDITY

Miss Jacquelin A. Long, 420 Carlisle street, has been pledged by Alpha Phi sorority at Bucknell University, Lewisburg. She is a graduate of Gettysburg high school.

Electric Service Cut Off for More Than 4 Hours This Morning

With power lines knocked out by what Metropolitan Edison Company crews said was the "worst storm in years," Gettysburg and this section of the county, including the Littlestown area, was without current for four and a half hours this morning.

When high winds leveled the 66,000 volt transmission lines between York and Hanover, all electrical service to this area was cut off about 4:15 o'clock.

Until those high tension lines were restored at 8:45 a.m., Hanover and Gettysburg and their surrounding areas were without electrical service.

Lines, Poles Down

Richard E. Dreas, local manager for the utility company, said it was the heaviest storm damage since he was stationed here three years ago.

Trees and branches blown across power lines caused most of the damage, he said, although some power line poles also went down. Near Bonneville, a chicken house was reported blown through power lines.

"I never say anything like this even in our worst summer electrical storms," Dreas said. He added that utility crewmen who have worked here for years said this storm was the "worst ever."

Asked about local line damage, Dreas said: "We have a bushel and a peck of that and it will take all of today to restore the local lines that have been knocked out. More calls are coming in all the time about service lines that are out. We're keeping after the work with all the men we have available and we'll keep going until all lines are restored."

Winds Cause Damage

Most of the damage to electric lines was caused by the very high winds that were estimated to have reached 50 or 60 miles an hour. The wind-driven torrents of rain that totaled more than 1.25 inches by 8:30 a.m. added to the trouble.

The Adams Rural Electric co-operative substations at Gettysburg, Hanover and Red Lion were without current while the Metropolitan Edison power lines were out. REA work crews were busy restoring local damage today.

Heldt Home Is Unroofed

About 3:30 o'clock this morning the high winds ripped the roof off the home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Heldt, 305 North Stratton street, and laid the home open to torrents of rain that ruined most of the interior of the home and many of its furnishings.

Dr. Heldt and members of his family attempted to check the flow of rain through the home with the use of washbubs and buckets but the downpour sent streams of water down the stairways to the first floor while more rain seeped through ceilings and floors.

Workmen were called early this morning to cover the exposed section of the attic against the weather.

Dr. Heldt could not estimate the damage immediately.

Storm Briefs

At the Warner hospital, the emergency lighting system took care of illumination in the operating and delivery rooms and hospital corridors but patients' rooms had no light and the dumb waiters and elevators did not operate. Breakfast trays had to be carried from the kitchens to the patients. Gas stoves in the kitchen made it possible to prepare the morning meal.

Kerosene lamps were pressed into service at the county home this morning when the electric power failed. Candles were used in the kitchen at the county jail while the morning meal was prepared on (Continued on Page 2)

at the service station. Wolford claimed that he spoke frequently to Miller about his financial situation. He claimed that Miller suggested that Wolford make out an affidavit that he had no debts and sell him the station.

The former Gettysburg policeman said that he had no intention of defrauding his creditors when he sold the station to Miller. He said that making the affidavit was the only way he could "protect Miller" in the sale. He added that his intention had been to go into bankruptcy but claimed Miller feared that if Wolford went in bankruptcy Miller also would have financial difficulties, since he had signed one of Wolford's notes.

Wolford said he planned to go to work and pay off his creditors after the sale of the service station.

The emergency power plant—with current from a storage battery system—kept the United Telephone switchboard operating throughout the power blackout. Manager John Caldwell said the system would operate without electricity "for a number of hours" but could not say how much longer the telephone system could have kept going without electric power.

Restaurants here were lighted with candles for the early customers this morning while those with gas stoves in their kitchens were able to serve breakfasts.

The Hotel Gettysburg fared better than anyone else. An emergency light plant, installed some time ago, furnished light in corridors, stairways, exits, the kitchen and in the lobby. It also explained the brilliantly lighted "parking" arrow sign at the rear of the hotel pointing to the public parking area there.

LAYNE UPSETS JOE WALCOTT BY DECISION

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—Rex Layne, a 22-year-old bruiser from the Utah sugar beet farms, has become a heavyweight contender overnight by his upset-of-the-year win over Jersey Joe Walcott.

Layne won't do any contending for two months while his battered left eye heals. Then he'll be ready for anything, says Manager Marv Jensen.

"We're ready for anyone, Ezzard Charles—anyone," said Jensen in the dressing room after the fight last night.

It probably won't be Charles for the title. At least not yet. More likely they'll move Layne into a bout with somebody like Roland Lastera or Rocky Marciano.

Jensen will talk business today with Al Weill, International Boxing club matchmaker. After that Jensen and his fighter will head toward home at Lewistown, Utah.

"I went out to bust his guts from the start," said Layne. "And I guess I did."

That about tells the story. Layne punished Walcott's body with straight right hands throughout the fight. Despite a smeared eye that became a circle of blood in the late rounds, he pressed the attack all the way.

LAYNE UPSETS JOE WALCOTT BY DECISION

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—Rex Layne, a 22-year-old bruiser from the Utah sugar beet farms, has become a heavyweight contender overnight by his upset-of-the-year win over Jersey Joe Walcott.

Layne won't do any contending for two months while his battered left eye heals. Then he'll be ready for anything, says Manager Marv Jensen.

"We're ready for anyone, Ezzard Charles—anyone," said Jensen in the dressing room after the fight last night.

It probably won't be Charles for the title. At least not yet. More likely they'll move Layne into a bout with somebody like Roland Lastera or Rocky Marciano.

Jensen will talk business today with Al Weil, International Boxing club matchmaker. After that Jensen and his fighter will head toward home at Lewistown, Utah.

"I went out to bust his guts from the start," said Layne. "And I guess I did."

That about tells the story. Layne punished Walcott's body with straight right hands throughout the fight. Despite a smeared eye that became a circle of blood in the late rounds, he pressed the attack all the way.

at the service station. Wolford claimed that he spoke frequently to Miller about his financial situation. He claimed that Miller suggested that Wolford make out an affidavit that he had no debts and sell him the station.

The former Gettysburg policeman said that he had no intention of defrauding his creditors when he sold the station to Miller. He said that making the affidavit was the only way he could "protect Miller" in the sale. He added that his intention had been to go into bankruptcy but claimed Miller feared that if Wolford went into bankruptcy Miller also would have financial difficulties, since he had signed one of Wolford's notes.

Wolford said he planned to go to work and pay off his creditors after the sale of the service station.

Kirby Page Speaks: Suggesting that peace now, short of victory, would be better for the warring nations than to fight on to a fruitless victory, Dr. Kirby Page, social evangelist, who has made 20 ocean crossings and lectured in 30 countries, in the interest of world peace, told an audience at St. James Lutheran church here Wednesday: Every nation that fights that long (to victory) will be crushed by debt, taxation, inflation and economic breakdown.

The 30-year-old Texas-born pacifist declared: "War itself constitutes the greatest threat to American democracy. . . ."

Bendersville Church Plans 3-Day Program: Bethlehem Lutheran church at Bendersville is observing its 100th anniversary with special programs on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. The Rev. Dr. O. D. Coble is the minister.

The sermon on Sunday morning was preached by the Rev. Dr. M. R. Hamsher, Harrisburg. On Sunday evening the Rev. Joseph E. Arnold, the only living ex-pastor of the Bethlehem Lutheran congregation, preached the sermon.

TAKE A CHANCE!

There are no more fascinating and inspiring stories than those of our pioneers, inventors, and scientists, for they have all had that adventuresome spirit which makes for progress. Those who take a chance, who are not afraid to risk, to experiment, and to continually try out new ways and plans are our great benefactors.

In my reading recently I came across this line by Eric Johnson. He said: "Beaten paths are for beaten men." People who take chances with an idea, or who refuse to travel the route of the multitude, always seem to win out, even against the greatest of difficulties. As a matter of fact most of the worthwhile achievements are those that have meant struggle and difficult experiences. They inspire victory!

Bold men and women have written the history of the world. One of the most inspiring of modern times is the example of Winston Churchill. His history of the Second World War will be a classic a hundred years from now, or for so long as books last.

Initiative is a wonderful possession. It inspires one to take a chance, to dare, and to go ahead. Without it we would all remain static and uninteresting. Read the thrilling story of the South American liberator, Simon Bolivar, often called the George Washington of that continent to the south. He gave freedom to his people from long Spanish rule. He led the first army across the Andes. He repeatedly took chances. He never gave up.

There was no beaten path to the door of the man who made the proverbial better mouse-trap, until a chance was taken in making that better mouse-trap. The earlier experimenters with the flying machine took chances with their lives, as many another has done, in some other sphere. Many a one has become a martyr that others might live, by taking a chance and offering his own body for experimental use.

There are always risks in taking a chance, but, as we have long heard, "Nothing ventured nothing gained." So, if you believe in yourself, or in the idea which you may have, take a chance. Test it out. A multitude of silent winners will be watching and cheering you on!

Just Folks

GOOD ANNOYANCE

If the lad's a little noisy at his play
Just be patient and enjoy it while you may.
Should the time come when he cannot race about
You'll be wishing that his little legs were stout.

If he talks when you are talking, as he will,
Then remember, were his voice forever still,
Though he'd frequently annoyed
you with his chat,
You'd be wishing for annoyance such as that.

You were once a little fellow, father wise.
You were noisy and had mischief in your eyes,
But your father and your mother understood
It is difficult for children to be good.

They were patient, though they scolded now and then,
And they loved you with a love too deep to pen.
Although often you annoyed them they were glad
That health and strength to trouble them you had.

The accident toll continues to lend weight to the suspicion that car engineers missed a good bet when they discarded the clutch instead of the accelerator.

Heat Tells The Story

With so many people taking delivery of new cars it is surprising how few realize that the main thing to watch is the motor temperature gauge. I found one owner poking along on the theory that he was being exceptionally kind to the new motor when a glance at the instrument panel would show that the engine was running too hot. So long as the motor temperature stays down the engine is breaking in normally and speeds you are traveling are not too fast for it. I have stressed the engineers' recommendations that modern motors should be driven at a lively speed during the break-in, but the matter of motor heat is your clue as to whether you are doing this properly. Sustaining speed isn't advisable. Make it up and down. And watch that gauge!

More Miles Per Gallon

In our eagerness to boost gas mileage it is all too easy to get into some blind alleys. I'm thinking of the chap who reasoned that because of air drag the engine would go further on a gallon of gas by running without the air cleaner. This offers no saving and the engine doesn't run as well. Another fallacy is to assume that there are no adjustments, other than for idling, on the modern carburetor. How about the float level? How about the adjustment for engine idling speed? And what of the linkage for the accelerator pump?

Most motorists who have been around a bit realize that engine power is inclined to take a nose-dive when the car is in higher altitudes, but they do not always realize that this is not necessarily due to the steep hills and the normal tendency for the engine to run at a higher temperature. The basic reason for the power loss is what engineers call decreased "volumetric efficiency." Any gas engine has something of a limit to the amount of fuel-air mixture it can take in within a fixed time, or at each suction stroke. This is dependent on the size, shape and action of the valves, the atmosphere pressure, the efficiency of the carburetor, etc. As the car goes upward in altitude atmosphere pressure goes down. Hence the normal lack of power in the higher altitudes.

The supercharger is a device for greatly improving volumetric efficiency.

Mechanic Joe Speaking:

"One place you wouldn't be likely to look to as an indication of the engine's health, or lack of it is the distributor shaft. Yet if oil is working up this shaft into the distributor the indications are that pressure is excessive in the crankcase. Assuming that the vents are open and that the oil filler pipe isn't accidentally capped, excessive pressure is likely to be the result of too much leakage of combustion gases past the pistons. Oil won't work up around that shaft unless forced to. Sight of oil in the distributor should then be a tip to give the engine a compression test to determine in just what condition the rings really are and what will be needed to bring the engine back to normal again."

Down At The Wheel

Motorists who take pride in their cars ought to take note of some of the little things that make for shabbiness. These are usually just a little out of sight and thus out of mind. A careful re-check, however, will tell the story.

Often the discordant note is discolored on the rear bumper from the exhaust. This is easily removed with chrome polish. There may be a lot of dust or dirt around the doors when they are opened, even though the door panel itself may be sparkling with polish, wax and hard work.

Many luggage compartments look like a chicken coop. Then there is a mark of spilled gasoline on the left rear fender. License plates that are battered and rusty certainly do not help the general picture. Nor do marred tire walls. Incidentally, some of these little marks also hint of the owner's carelessness as a driver.

Rated Power Is Peak

Occasionally an interested reader will ask if the rated horsepower of an engine is actually its top power output. In other words, if an engine is rated by the factory at 125 horsepower at 3,400 revolutions per minute the question is will this output be higher at a higher engine speed, and will the engine run at a higher speed?

The rated horsepower is the top output. The engine will run faster but the power output will start downward. As for the torque rating, or lugging power, this reaches a peak at comparatively low engine speed.

Few car batteries are treated to any such consideration, but solution should always be tested with a hydrometer when adding water.

Some tap water is all right for use in a car battery, but oddly enough it's thumbs down on either boiled or filtered water.

Unless a battery has some trick filler which takes care of things automatically do not fill to more than 3/4 inch above the cells' separator.

It would be easy to let the breath-taking power, the luxurious ride and the gleaming good looks of a Buick sweep you off your feet.

And once you've sampled the sweet response of Dynaflo Drive*—you feel a big lack in anything else.

But let's be practical about all this.

What does it cost to buy—and to own—this star performer?

The first answer is a look at delivered prices—and most people still are surprised to find that a car which offers so much actually costs so little.

That's true, whether you put the SPECIAL, the SUPER or the superb ROADMASTER against other cars of comparable dimensions. They certainly shine on a first-cost basis.

But this is only half the story, as you'll soon find out on any used-car lot.

Year in, year out, the resale prices of Buicks stay much closer to first cost than the prices of cars with lesser merit.

And among recent models, Buicks with Dynaflo Drive command such a premium that you can almost figure you get this dream drive for free.

So why not let yourself go? Why not walk right into your Buick dealer's now and say, put me down for one of those!

There's no time like the present for showing your good judgment.

TAKE A CHANCE!

There are no more fascinating and inspiring stories than those of our pioneers, inventors, and scientists, for they have all had that adventurous spirit which makes for progress. Those who take a chance, who are not afraid to risk, to experiment, and to continually try out new ways and plans are our great benefactors.

In my reading recently I came across this line by Eric Johnson. He said: "Beaten paths are for beaten men." People who take chances with an idea, or who refuse to travel the route of the multitude, always seem to win out, even against the greatest of difficulties. As a matter of fact most of the worthwhile achievements are those that have meant struggle and difficult experiences. They inspire victory!

Men and women have written the history of the world. One of the most inspiring of modern times is the example of Winston Churchill. His history of the Second World War will be a classic a hundred years from now, or for so long as books last.

Initiative is a wonderful possession. It inspires one to take a chance, to dare, and to go ahead. Without it we would all remain static and uninteresting. Read the thrilling story of the South American hero, Simon Bolivar, often called the George Washington of that continent to the south. He gave freedom to his people from long Spanish rule. He led the first army across the Andes. He repeatedly took chances. He never gave up.

There was no beaten path to the door of the man who made the proverbial better mouse-trap, until a chance was taken in making that better mouse-trap. The earlier experimenters with the flying machine took chances with their lives, as many another has done, in some other sphere. Many a one has become a martyr that others might live, by taking a chance and offering his own body for experimental use.

There are always risks in taking a chance, but, as we have long heard, "Nothing ventured nothing gained." So, if you believe in yourself, or in the idea which you may have, take a chance. Test it out. A multitude of silent winners will be watching and cheering you on!

GOOD ANNOYANCE

If the lad's a little noisy at his play Just be patient and enjoy it while you may. Should the time come when he cannot race about You'll be wishing that his little legs were stout.

If he talks when you are talking, as he will, Then remember, were his voice forever still, Though he'd frequently annoyed you with his chat, You'd be wishing for annoyance such as that.

You were once a little fellow, father wise, You were noisy and had mischief in your eyes, But your father and your mother understood It is difficult for children to be good.

They were patient, though they scolded now and then, And they loved you with a love too deep to pen.

Although often you annoyed them they were glad That health and strength to trouble them you had.

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
BY FREDERICK C. RUSSELL
Member S.A.E.

The accident toll continues to lend weight to the suspicion that car engineers missed a good bet when they discarded the clutch instead of the accelerator.

Heat Tells The Story

With so many people taking delivery of new cars it is surprising how few realize that the main thing to watch is the motor temperature gauge. I found one owner working along on the theory that he was being exceptionally kind to the new motor when a glance at the instrument panel would show that the engine was running too hot. So long as the motor temperature stays down the engine is breaking in normally and speeds you are traveling are not too fast for it. I have stressed the engineers' recommendation that modern motors should be driven at a lively speed during the break-in, but the matter of motor heat is your clue as to whether you are doing this properly.

Sustaining speed isn't advisable. Make it up and down. And watch that gauge!

More Miles Per Gallon
In our eagerness to boost gas mileage it is all too easy to get into some blind alleys. I'm thinking of the chap who reasoned that because of air drag the engine would go further on a gallon of gas by running without the air cleaner. This offers no saving and the engine doesn't run as well. Another fallacy is to assume that there are no adjustments, other than for idling, on the modern carburetor. How about the float level? How about the adjustment for engine idling speed? And what of the linkage for the acceleration pump?

Most motorists who have been around a bit realize that engine power is inclined to take a nose-dive when the car is in higher altitudes, but they do not always realize that this is not necessarily due to the steep hills and the normal tendency for the engine to run at a higher temperature. The basic reason for the power loss is what engineers call decreased volumetric efficiency. Any gas engine has something of a limit to the amount of fuel-air mixture it can take in within a fixed time, or at each suction stroke. This is dependent on the size, shape and action of the valves, the atmosphere pressure, the efficiency of the carburetor, etc. As the car goes upward in altitude atmosphere pressure goes down. Hence the normal lack of power in the higher altitudes.

The supercharger is a device for greatly improving volumetric efficiency.

Mechanic Joe Speaking:
"One place you wouldn't be likely to look to as an indication of the engine's health, or lack of it, is the distributor shaft. Yet if oil is working up this shaft into the distributor the indications are that pressure is excessive in the crankcase. Assuming that the vents are open and that the oil filler pipe isn't accidentally capped, excessive pressure is likely to be the result of too much leakage of combustion gases past the pistons. Oil won't work up around that shaft unless forced to. Sight of oil in the distributor should then be a tip to give the engine a compression test to determine in just what condition the rings really are and what will be needed to bring the engine back to normal again."

Down At The Wheel
Motorists who take pride in their cars ought to take note of some of the little things that make for shabbiness. These are usually just a little out of sight and thus out of mind. A careful re-check, however, will tell the story.

Often the discordant note is discolored on the rear bumper from the exhaust. This is easily removed with chrome polish. There may be a lot of dust or dirt around the doors when they are opened, even though the door panel itself may be sparkling with polish, wax and hard work.

Many luggage compartments look like a chicken coop. Then there is a mark of spilled gasoline on the leather tender. License plates that are battered and rusty certainly do not help the general picture. Nor do marred tire walls. Incidentally, some of these little marks also hint at the owner's carelessness as a driver.

Rated Power Is Peak

Occasionally an interested reader will ask if the rated horsepower of an engine is actually its top power output. In other words, if an engine is rated by the factory at 125 horsepower at 3,400 revolutions per minute the question is will this output be higher at a higher engine speed, and will the engine run at a higher speed?

The rated horsepower is the top output. The engine will run faster, but the power output will start to go down. As for the torque rating, or lagging power, this reaches a peak at comparatively low engine speed.

Few car batteries are treated to any such consideration, but solution should always be tested with a hydrometer when adding water. Some tap water is all right for use in a car battery, but oddly enough it's thumbs down on either cooled or filtered water.

Unless a battery has some trick filler which takes care of things automatically do not fill to more than 1/2 inch above the cells' separator.

It would be easy to let the breath-taking power, the luxurious ride and the gleaming good looks of a Buick sweep you off your feet.
And once you've sampled the sweet response of Dynaflo Drive*—you feel a big lack in anything else.
But let's be practical about all this.
What does it cost to buy—and to own—this star performer?
The first answer is a look at delivered prices—and most people still are surprised to find that a car which offers so much actually costs so little.
That's true, whether you put the SPECIAL, the SUPER or the superb ROADMASTER against other cars of comparable dimensions. They certainly shine on a first-cost basis.
But this is only half the story, as you'll soon find out on any used-car lot.
Year in, year out, the resale prices of Buicks stay much closer to first cost than the prices of cars with lesser merit.
And among recent models, Buicks with Dynaflo Drive command such a premium that you can almost figure you get this dream drive for free.
So why not let yourself go? Why not walk right into your Buick dealer's now and say, put me down for one of those!
There's no time like the present for showing your good judgment.

minutes later. Picture the tragedy here if he happened to trip and not be able to get up promptly, or if he should delay backing the car out. With all the carbon monoxide concentration he could easily be trapped.

It is amazing in this day and age how little appreciation the public has of the danger in this insidious, tasteless, odorless and colorless gas.

What's Your Trouble?

Q. Can you tell me what would cause a bumping action in my car? Wheels and tires have been balanced. One mechanic even checked for an eccentric wheel.—H. L. F.

A. This could be due to badly worn universal joints.

Q. Since having the engine overhauled the hydraulic valve lifters seem to allow the valve to be quite noisy.—Wm. L. B.

A. You will find that this is due to the light oil used while breaking in the reboiled job. Your mechanic has used light oil to take care of this, but the oil is too light for these special tappets. When you start using the normally heavier oil I feel sure that the clicking will cease.

Q. The other day the engine of my car refused to crank. The car was pushed to a filling station for a battery check-up and while waiting there I tried the starter and found it working normally. The battery tested fully charged.—J. R., Jr.

A. This suggests a poor ground or a damaged starter cable. There can also be starter failure if the cable is not tightly connected to the starter post.

Q. I do not seem to be getting the same gas mileage around town as I did several years ago, even though the carburetor has been rebuilt and the whole engine tuned up. It does not seem to me that the car should age enough to cause this mileage drop.—N. B. L.

A. You will find that this is largely due to increased motor traffic, more lights, more stops.

Q. What would cause the brakes of my car to knock when I apply them? It seems to me that the trouble is with the left front brake, but I am not sure. The knock is very decided—almost like a hammer blow.—R. T. McB.

A. This is probably due to a scored brake drum. In other words, the drum involved has ridges out into it and the brake shoes actually screw inward until they strike. This gives the knocking sound.

Q. There is a most peculiar clicking noise in my car when slowing down. I have eliminated the motor because the noise appears when the clutch is engaged or disengaged.

A. Again the universal joints are involved. They are badly worn and should be replaced.

Q. Recently there is a very decided exhaust noise at the engine of my car. It sounds something like a mild cut-out. I do not smell any gas. The muffler was recently replaced.—N. V. P.

A. This indicates an exhaust manifold gasket leak. It could have been hastened by handling of the exhaust pipe when installing the new muffler.

Mr. Russell will answer questions regarding the safe care and operation of your car. Just address him at 254 Fern street, West Hartford 7, Connecticut, and enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply. There is no charge.
